SANFORD COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

It’s no secret that across the nation there is a high demand for quality teachers, education specialists, administrators, school psychologists, and counselors.

For the past 15 years, National University has recommended more credentialed teachers than any other single institution of higher education in California, according to the Commission on Teacher Credentialing. The California State University Center for Teacher Quality reports that a higher proportion of our graduating candidates are hired by school districts in California.

Whether new to teaching, an experienced professional, or moving up the administrative ranks, the National University Sanford College of Education has a program relevant to your needs and is offered in a format that fits your lifestyle. Available online and on campus, you’ll find competitively priced, quality programs offered in a one-course-per-month format that accelerates your time to degree. Year-round registration and open enrollment make it easy to get started and complete a program tailored to your individual needs. Your education takes place in a learning community with quality, full-time faculty whose teaching, scholarship, and service enrich your learning environment. Instruction is provided by select part-time faculty who exemplify quality in their fields. You will engage with professionals who are highly qualified and have vast experiences in the schools. Our faculty are deeply committed to preparing inspired educators who will transform schools.

The Sanford College of Education offers bachelor’s degrees, master’s degrees, certificates, and credentials in teaching, school counseling, school psychology, special education, early childhood education, school administration, and higher education administration. With a credential or degree, you can enter or advance in the education field. The College of Education also has more internship contracts with elementary and secondary school districts than any other university in California. Our partnerships offer access to a wide network of educators, helping our candidates find jobs and advance their careers.

A leader in the field, National University prepares you for the challenges and joys a career in education can bring. Whether you choose to pursue a career in teaching, special education, early childhood education, administration, school psychology, or counseling, the College of Education is dedicated to scholarship, teamwork, active reflection, ethics, and exemplary standards.
